Global market is eyeing Fed's policy decision and anticipating a rate hike of 50bps and also balance sheet reduction. Inflationary concerns in the Eurozone led Germany's 10Y yield touched the 1% mark (last trading session) for the first time since CY15. Central Bank of Australia also raised the rates for the first time since CY10 by 25bps against market expectation of 15bps, amidst inflationary concerns. In the US, durable goods and factory orders data came in better than expected, while in the Eurozone manufacturing activity remained a concern.

- Except Nikkei and Sensex, other global indices ended higher as investors monitored key central banks decisions and earnings reports across the globe. European indices too climbed higher with FTSE inching up by 0.7%. On the domestic front, Sensex (0.1%) ended in red and was dragged down by consumer durable and auto stocks. It is trading further lower today, in line with other Asian stocks.
